WORLD ROSE CONVENTION 2025 in FUKUYAMA

Sun., May 18 to Sat., May 24, 2025

Japan Airports and Routes

Fukuyama is most conveniently accessed via Hiroshima Airport, but if you are traveling within Japan before or after the convention, you can choose between domestic flights or the Shinkansen (bullet train).

If traveling from Tokyo, you can fly into Hiroshima Airport from:

- Haneda Airport (Tokyo's main domestic airport) – Approx. 15 flights per day
- Narita Airport (Tokyo's main international airport) – Approx. 3 flights per day

From Hiroshima Airport, take the airport limousine bus directly to Fukuyama.

For travelers arriving at Osaka (Kansai Airport) or Fukuoka (Fukuoka Airport), the Shinkansen is the more convenient option.

Fukuyama Station is directly accessible from:

- Osaka/Kyoto (Shin-Osaka, Kyoto) – Approx. 1 hr
- Fukuoka/Kyushu (Hakata) – Approx. 1.5 hrs

Please choose the best route based on your itinerary and schedule.

This time, we will introduce ① and ② in the diagram below.

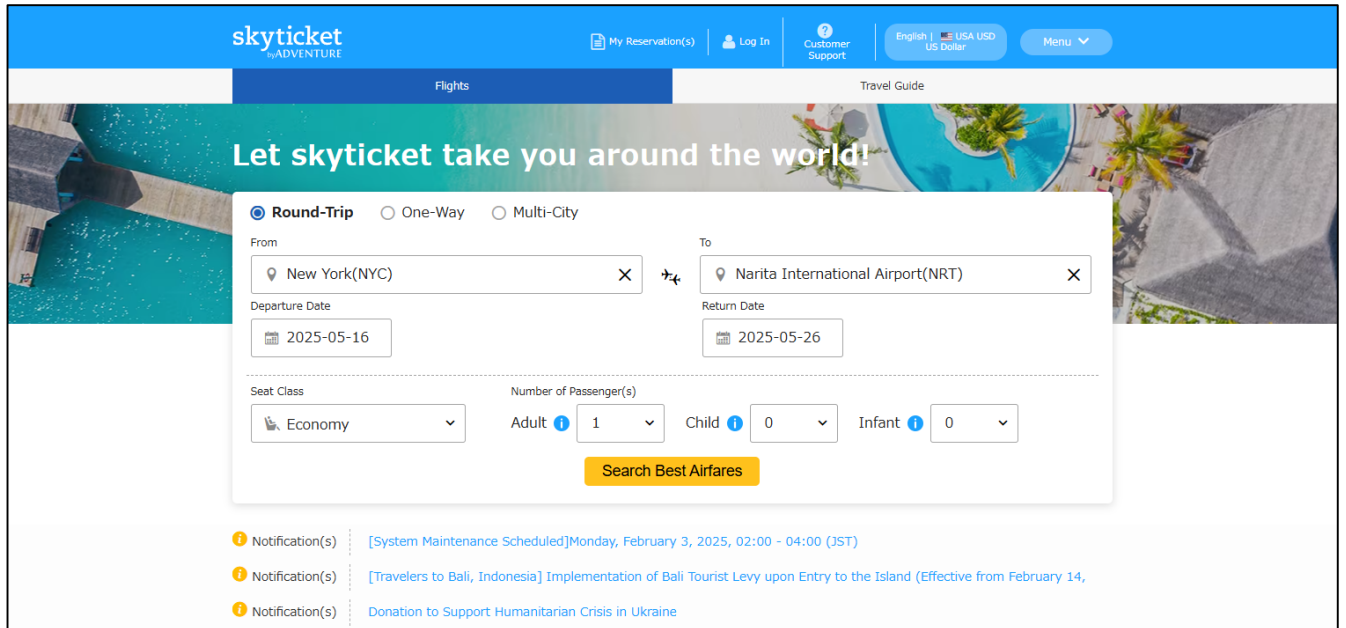

Fukuyama

The time required is an estimate. / Transfer time is not included.

Flight Search System

You can search for the latest available flights from the link below.

The screenshot shows the skyticket website's flight search interface. Routes using Narita Airport

① Narita to Fukuyama

To reach Fukuyama from Narita Airport, you can take the Narita Express and transfer to the Shinkansen (bullet train). Alternatively, you can travel to Haneda Airport by train or bus and take a domestic flight to Hiroshima Airport.

1. Narita Express (NEX):

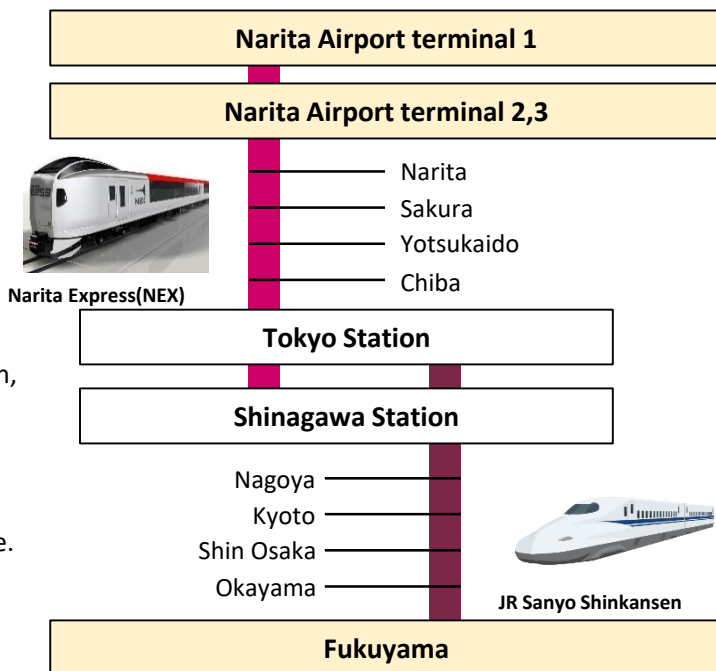

The Narita Express is an airport train connecting Narita Airport to central Tokyo. It stops at Tokyo Station and Shinagawa Station, where you can transfer to the Shinkansen. All seats on the Narita Express require a reservation, but you can purchase tickets on the day of travel. The train also has designated space for luggage.

2. Shinkansen (Bullet Train):

After taking the Narita Express, you will transfer to the Shinkansen. The Shinkansen is Japan's high-speed train system, traveling at speeds over 200 km/h. You can travel to Fukuyama by Shinkansen from either Tokyo Station or Shinagawa Station.

Reserved seats are available, but non-reserved seats are also an option.

If you are carrying large luggage, a reserved seat with designated luggage space must be booked.

How to Buy Tickets:

• For Narita Express Tickets:

You can buy your tickets at ticket counters or vending machines in front of the gates on the B1F of Terminals 1 and 2. For peace of mind, you can also make an advance reservation online.

• For Shinkansen Tickets:

Shinkansen tickets are available at ticket vending machines or at the Midori no Madoguchi counters at the stations. Reserved seats can be purchased on the day of travel, and online reservations are also available.

② Haneda to Fukuyama

1. Via Narita to Haneda, then Domestic Flight

You can take the Airport Limousine Bus from Narita Airport to Haneda Airport, a direct and convenient service. Buses run frequently and offer comfortable seating and ample luggage space. Once at Haneda, you can board a domestic flight to Fukuyama (via Hiroshima Airport). There are approximately 15 flights per day from Haneda Airport to Hiroshima, operated by ANA and JAL.

For flight reservations:

JAL: <https://www.jal.com/index.html>

ANA: <https://www.ana.co.jp/en/jp/international/>

2. Direct Arrival at Haneda, then Domestic Flight

If you are arriving directly at Haneda Airport from abroad, take a domestic flight to Hiroshima Airport.

3. Haneda to Shinkansen, then to Fukuyama

From Haneda Airport, you can use the Keikyu Airport Line to reach Shinagawa Station in central Tokyo. At Shinagawa Station, transfer to the Shinkansen to Fukuyama.

This option allows you to travel to Fukuyama by train, without requiring a domestic flight.

For Keikyu Airport Line tickets: <https://www.haneda-tokyo-access.com/en/>

From Hiroshima to Fukuyama

If you're flying into Hiroshima Airport, you can take an Airport Limousine Bus to Fukuyama.

Tickets are available at the ticket machine in the domestic arrival lobby or can be purchased directly from the driver (no change given). IC cards such as ICOCA are accepted.
